STAR SIGNALS

Do you really read your STAR COMICS, or do you just look at the pictures?

Reading has always been pretty important to me. I've enjoyed it for as long as I can remember. When I was a kid, you could usually find a paperback stuffed into the back pocket of my jeans. (Now that I'm an adult, you have to look inside my briefcase!)

I guess I'm what you might call a Book Person. I barely finish one book, and I start on the next. I used to haunt the local library every Saturday to see what new books were available. (I still try to visit my library once a week, but I don't only go on Saturdays anymore.) Of course, I also read magazines, newspapers, and more comic books than you could ever imagine!

My favorite book authors used to be Franklin W. Dixon (THE HARDY BOYS), Walter Farley (THE BLACK STALLION), and Edgar Rice Burroughs (TARZAN). They helped transport me to distant lands, and took me on some pretty wild adventures!

I always figured that we readers had a real advantage over non-readers. We get to use our imaginations more than they do. We also have a whole lot more fun!

Maybe it's time we helped those non-readers along! We owe it to them to show them what they're missing.

Here are a few ways you can help:

- 1) Talk about the books and comics you've read with your friends.
- 2) Tell them why you read a particular book or comic.

3) Tell them what you liked about it!

4) Suggest a few books and comics that they might enjoy reading.

5) Lend them some of your books and comics to read.

6) Encourage them to join you on your next trip to the library, or the store where you buy your comics.

Who knows? Some of your friends might decide that they enjoy reading, too. You couldn't do them a nicer favor!

Let me know if you have any luck.

Thanks for being there,

Tom DeFalco

TOP DOG SPEAKS OUT

NANCY BROWN
ASSISTANT EDITOR

It isn't often that a dog gets a chance to speak his mind—knowing the minds of some of the dogs I've met, believe me, that's a blessing. In any case, I'd like to take this opportunity to tell all of you out there in Fan Land (Fan Land, that's due east of Finland or due south of the Funland Amusement Park) about several very important coming attractions.

After finishing this month's special issue, featuring my new pal Heathcliff, you'd better prepare yourself for an even more spectacular event. Are you sitting down, my friends? I mean, really sitting down?

Well, next issue, on these very pages you are going to be present at an adventure that you will not want to miss! My special guest and cohort in adventure will be the web-slinging wall-crawler himself! He of the red and blue costume and the hysterical histrionics—the amazing SPIDER-MAN!

And I promise you this—it is one fabulous adventure, involving robbery, arson, a boy's dreams, a young man's heroism and a dog's (shem!) very special courage! It that seems to promise too much, just look for "The Comic Book Capers" in Top Dog #10! This special Top Dog-Spider-Man team-up goes on sale July 15th! Better be there!

You should also be on the lookout for my pal Heathcliff's upcoming adventure starring those two slick members of the vice squad—the VICE MICE! That's in Heathcliff #11, going on sale on July 1st! It's the take-off of the summer! A joyful jet ride into jocularity! (My, can that dog use the language!)

One more thing, and I'll be on my way. Why don't you write us here and let us know what you think of the Secret Life of TDP DOG! It's hard to believe, but I get almost as much joy from listening as I do from talking. And you might even get an answer from a ca-nine who's a ca-ten!

(Okay, Joey Jordan, I'm going to shut up and get back on all fours!)
